Sheri Pitts is a farm wife and mother of three daughters. She started working in an office setting in 1989 and has held several positions as a clerical businesswoman but is currently the Richland County Extension Office Assistant. It is actually through one of her daughters that she has been introduced to the poultry world ten years ago. Growing up in a small town she was still far from a country girl. Some people that knew her well did not think she would adjust, however she surprised them all with her abilities to adapt.

She has been with the Richland County Extension office since June of 2011 and shortly after starting was asked to fill in for a vacancy in the office, which she did until this February. She enjoys fast-paced work with deadlines. Working on newsletters, enrollments, mailing notifications and schedules to multiple groups.

Her youngest daughter has been raising Rosecombs for 3 years and enjoys showing at many local shows.
